

High Common was established as an allotment during World War II as part of the “Dig for Victory” campaign. It is a small sloping site of 34 plots on the northern slope of Bath. The site is on the Cotswold Way. Its countryside location means that the site is home to deer, foxes, rabbits and many other smaller animals and insects.